HOW THIS PAPER WAS BUILT

This full-length practice paper was built from the consensus of a six-model AI panel (fable, opus, gpt-5.6-sol, gemini-3.1-pro, grok, deepseek), each of which independently predicted the 2026 examination from the 2019–2025 papers and NESA marking feedback. The 185 question-level predictions were clustered; every structural and Section I cluster at consensus probability ≥ 0.55 is realised, and — because every option is printed every year — each option's question realises the panel's highest-consensus focus call for that option, with remaining slots drawn from the watch list and from the focus calls in the panel's rested-option rationales. Each question is tagged with the cluster or watch-list item it realises. Every question is original — none is copied from a past paper. Sources are described, not reproduced: each [SOURCE] block specifies a historically plausible source type and provenance for practice purposes; no quotation is attributed to any real historical figure.

Answers and marking notes are published as a separate PDF — sit the paper first, then download the solutions from intuitioneducation.com.au/hsc-2026/modern-history.

Source Booklet — Section I

Source A [SOURCE: Extract from the private diary of a Catholic primary-school teacher in a small Bavarian town, dated October 1937. The writer describes mounting pressure to join the National Socialist Teachers' League, the removal of crucifixes from her classroom under a new directive, and her fear that a colleague has reported her reluctance to give the German greeting. The diary was donated by her family to a regional archive and published in a 1998 collection of everyday-life diaries from the Nazi period.]

Source B [SOURCE: Political cartoon published in a British daily newspaper, October 1935, at the time of the Italian invasion of Abyssinia. The cartoon depicts the League of Nations as a stately but unarmed doorkeeper standing before a gate marked "Collective Security", politely asking a heavily armed intruder to stop, while national leaders watch from behind a fence. A caption mocks the gap between the League's words and its powers.]

Source C [SOURCE: Photograph issued by the German Labour Front press office, summer 1937, showing workers waving from the deck of a Strength Through Joy (Kraft durch Freude) cruise ship in a northern German port. The image is carefully composed: smiling workers in clean clothes, a band on the quay, KdF banners along the rail. It was distributed to regional newspapers for reproduction.]

Source D [SOURCE: Extract from an academic study of German industrial workers under National Socialism, published by a university press in 2009. The historian argues that material conditions for workers were mixed — falling unemployment and subsidised leisure alongside frozen wages, longer hours and the loss of independent unions — and includes a table comparing German Labour Front membership, average weekly hours and real wages for each year from 1933 to 1939.]
